Bennett Birth Of Museum - block-diagram.dbnews.it

Bennett examines the power dynamics of museums, fairs and international exhibitions. In dialogue with Foucault, Bennett argues that public museums are not only places of education and knowledge, but of social reform. Yet, Bennett is interested in how the power dynamic of social reform operates and whether institutional intentions are successful.

The Birth of the Museum | Taylor & Francis Group

Bennett is interested in the formation of museums in the 19th century and later on in the 20th century, and on the educational and intructional intentions and objectives as translated in their arrangements by the 'inventors' of museums. Bennett therefore focuses on the conceptual side of museums rather than on their reception by their audience.

It is this shift, I suggest, which can best account for the discursive space of the public museum. The birth of the museum is coincident with, and supplied a primary institutional condition for, the emergence of a new set of knowledges - geology, biology, archaeology, anthropology, history and art history - each of which, in its museological deployment, arranged objects as parts of evolutionary sequences (the history of the earth, of life, of man, and of civilisation) which, in their ...

Tony Bennett | The Political Rationality of the Museum

In reviewing Foucault on the asyl um, the clinic, and the prison as institutional articulations of power and knowledge relations, Douglas Crimp suggests that there ' is another such institution of confinement ripe for analysis in Foucault 's terms - the museum - and another discipline - art history' (Crimp 1985: 45) .
